ADDRESSES SUMMER SCHOOL STUDENTS

Prof. Wellington Patrick, director of the Summer School at the University of Kentucky, delivered an address Tuesday to the students and teachers of the Bourbon County Summer Schools, at the Paris High School. His topic was "Literature." Wednesday afternoon Prof. M. E. Ligon, of the University, spoke on a subject of special interest along the lines of summer school work, and yesterday afternoon Dr. James L. Douglass, delivered an interesting and instructive address.

These speakers were secured for this special purpose through the efforts of Prof. Lee Kirkpatrick, Superintendent of the Paris Public Schools, who is a member of the faculty of the Summer School at the University of Kentucky. Other speakers will be heard here from time to time during the sessions of the local summer school.

An effort is being made to get Dr. C. A. McMurray, of Peabody College, who will be at the University of Kentucky the latter part of the week, to speak at the session of the Summer School this afternoon.

Examinations were held yesterday and the final examinations will be concluded to-day. The six weeks' session will close with the exercises to be held this afternoon.
